For over 30 years SisterLove Inc. has been on a mission to eradicate the adverse impact of HIV/AIDS, STDs, and other sexual and reproductive health and justice challenges impacting women and their families through education, prevention, support, research, and human rights advocacy in the United States and around the world.

We've been fighting for 30 years... but our fight has just begun.

WE'VE ONLY
JUST BEGUN

What an amazing 30 years it has been. And what a critical future it will be. SisterLove started from one desk in a borrowed office and a lofty dream to eradicate HIV/AIDS and accelerate the women's reproductive justice movement. Thirty years later we are a team of women warriors conducting programs in the U.S. and around the world. We fight for these rights on the streets, the world's leading councils, think tanks, in the halls of government, health clinics and research centers. We partner with civil organizations, global corporations, foundations, academic institutions and government entities.

In the last decade we dramatically increased our reach from cisgender women of color, to transgender and gender non-conforming individuals, lesbian, bisexual, gay and queer-identified youth, women and men.

Still, challenges remain. In some U.S. regions, Black women are diagnosed for HIV 13-22 times higher than White women. New infections in Black and Latino gay and bisexual men are growing in the U.S. South. Access to reproductive health and reproductive rights are eroding thus our sexual and reproductive justice movement is needed more than ever.

HIV awareness and prevention, as well as sexual reproductive health support, are prevalent in every walk of our lives. Despite new science, new tools and new strategies to "End the Epidemic," without securing full protection of human rights and social reproductive justice; there will be no end.

After 30 years, we've only just begun.

HEAP

Health Education and Prevention

The Health Education and Prevention (HEAP) program consists of: 1) education, prevention, intervention and linkage to care services that target African-American and Latinx women through evidence-based group and individual level interventions, and community and media outreach; and 2) structured efforts to critically assess and evaluate other HIV prevention and education programs. Our Testing and Linkage to Care for All (TLC4ALL) program is housed under HEAP. Through this program and our Women Empowerment Groups, we provide access to PrEP for Women programs.

Policy and Advocacy Program (PAP)

Policy and Advocacy Program seeks to utilize various communication and mobilization strategies to increase education and awareness of the issues of sexual and reproductive health, especially in women of color and other vulnerable populations. Initiatives that are a part of this program include the National Black Women's Reproductive Justice Agenda, which is a collective policy initiative for organizations focused on Black Women's Sexual Reproductive Justice (SRJ) issues; the Healthy Love Youth Advocates (HL-YA), which seeks to increase the number of youth leaders who advocate for youth-related SRJ issues; and SisterLove's SRJ Advocacy Campaign.

CBRRP

Community Based Research Programs

Community-Based Research Program works in conjunction with partners throughout local communities to conduct research that is dedicated to HIV positive women and those most impacted by SRJ issues. SisterLove's research project entitled "Improving Access to Medication Abortion among Black and Latinx Women in Georgia" is housed under this program. This research project is implemented as a part of a partnership with Emory University's Center for Reproductive Health Research in the Southeast.

International

Our International program was inspired by relationships and collaborations with women and organizations around the world, particularly in South Africa. We conduct agribusiness efforts to support HIV-affected women, prevention, and advocacy programs for girls and women and our WomenNOW! Conference which focuses on the intersection of HIV and SRJ at the International AIDS Conference. Our iSTARSHIPP program, funded by the DREAMS Initiative from PEPFAR, addresses evidenced-based interventions to reduce HIV incidence in adolescent girls and young women.
